

SUNDAY SCHOOLS PLAN FESTIVITIES IN ALEXANDRIA

Salvation Army's Fete Will Be Held Tonight.

THE HERALD BUREAU,
A. S. Douglas,
17 King Street.

ALEXANDRIA, Va., Dec. 26.—During the week various Sunday schools of the city will hold elaborate holiday celebrations and prizes will be distributed. Candy, nuts and fruit are in store for hundreds of youngsters who attend. Celebrations were held this afternoon by St. Mary's Catholic School at the Lyceum Hall and tonight by Immanuel Lutheran Sunday School. The Salvation Army will hold its celebration at 7 o'clock Monday night and Grace Episcopal at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. Trinity Methodist Episcopal also will hold its celebration at 7:30 o'clock Monday night.

James Edward Drinckman, 5 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Edward Drinckman, died yesterday at his parents' residence, 516 Queen street. His funeral will take place at 2:30 o'clock Monday afternoon. Services will be conducted by Rev. O. P. Lloyd, pastor of the Second Baptist Church. Burial will be in Bethel Cemetery.

Fire at 9 o'clock last night practically destroyed the two-story frame dwelling on North Washington street occupied by J. W. Carson and wife and seven children. The origin of the fire has not been determined. Occupants lost practically all of their furniture.

"The Man in the Community" was the subject of an address delivered by Representative L. W. Fairfield before a men's mass meeting this afternoon in the Westminster Building.

The services at St. Paul's Episcopal Church today were conducted by Thomas Williams of the Episcopal Theological Seminary.

CAPITAL FIGHTING SOCIALIZED MINES

Germans Are Scheming to Block Workers' Demands.

BERLIN, Dec. 26.—"Big Business" is threatening to "sell out" the Upper Silesian plebiscite to Poland. If full socialization of coal mines is carried through by the Reichstag. The fight of "big business" is a stiff one, growing sharper all the time, as the workmen more and more demand that real socialization be accomplished.

In the Upper Silesian case, the antisocialization backers are saying that they will indulge in a pro-German propaganda to influence the plebiscite, rather than to have this rich district remain German under socialization. They say that if it went Polish, they would still retain their capital interest.

At the same time many workers are of the opinion that Hugo Stinnes, Germany's wealthiest man, is willing to see the Ruhr district occupied by the French to prevent socialization. Stinnes naturally denies any such thought, but the socialistic press continues to hint that he has schemes more or less connected with the French to save his holdings.

"Vorwaerts," for instance, discussing the situation, says: "The danger of a socialization of the mines has already caused some remarkable phenomena in the Silesian capitalist circles. Shall this be repeated, in stronger form, in the Rhineland?"

Stinnes and Voegler succeeded in getting through the socialization subcommittee of seven a partial socialization measure which would still keep capital in the industry; but this met with workers' opposition and at the time this it written a subcommittee of 14, under the Reichswirtschaftsrat, is reconsidering the draft.

Shelter in Arctic Wastes Hoped for Lost Airmen

MONTREAL, Dec. 26.—The last hope that the three naval officers who set out in a balloon two weeks ago were swept somewhere northward were safe was advanced by aerial experts here today who said the men may have landed in some wild spot in the Hindustan territory where they may be snowbound for the entire winter.

Lieut. A. W. Evans, balloon expert, sent to Canada by the Navy Department, it was learned today had completed all arrangements for the search and intended to return to the States.

The only hope of safety for the men was that they had landed in a populated area in the cold north where they might have received assistance from traders of that country.

They were unable to make any of the posts they must have been blown to death in the heavy blizzards which have swept the area in the last few weeks.

An organized search for the men is impossible according to experts and it was considered highly probable the men might be hidden from civilization for two or three months more until the snow melt and communication with the semi-Arctic region is restored.

Tot Says Dad Threw Her From 3rd Floor Window

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Hurled out of an apartment house window three floors above the street, Catherine Janzer, 13 years old, was reported dying here today while her father, George Janzer, was lodged in jail on a charge of felonious assault.

Neighbors reported to police the girl was found in a rear yard. At the hospital it was said both her legs were fractured and she was suffering internal injuries.

"My father threw me out of a window," she whispered before she lapsed into unconsciousness, neighbors said.

Police arrested Janzer who, they said, was intoxicated.

Workmen in 3020 Find Queer Bottle And Start to Sing

NEW YORK, Dec. 26.—Two thousand years from today, it may be like this:

NEWARK, N. J., Dec. 26, 3020 A. D.—Workmen excavating in the borough of New Jersey for the new 10, 882 story terminal building of the Martine Aerial Transport Company today made a queer discovery.

Several yards below the surface of the earth, in what was once the village of Jersey City, they encountered the ruins of the old town. One of the stones which proved to be hollow was severed by an electric cutting machine. In it was found a glass container filled with a strange liquid.

The bottle was labeled "Booth Whisky, 100 proof."

The mystery of the curious label was further deepened when the bottle was opened and a strange sweet odor issued forth. Some of the workmen, sampling the amber colored fluid apparently were poisoned. They danced joyously and sang. An ambulance removed them to a hospital.

In the stone were found some ancient documents of the people of 1920. The bottle, it seemed, was placed in the stone by a governor, Edward L. Edwards, in December of 1920. It was a cornerstone of a bank building of that primitive age. Edwards, it is believed, was once governor of the province of New Jersey.

Historians were being consulted today in an effort to discover whether or not poisonous fluid, known as "Scotch Whisky," was known in the days of 1920.

Latest reports from the hospital indicated the workmen were still in a strange merry trance.

Poker 'Mid Mistletoe Rage in Cincinnati Homes

CINCINNATI, Dec. 26.—"Till raise you," echoed through the hazy wreaths in many Cincinnati homes today, according to Edward Brendamour, head of a large sporting house here. More playing cards and poker chips were sold this year for Christmas gifts than ever before, Brendamour said.

"The women have made a raid on poker chips and cards for presents," Brendamour said, "and I should say we have sold five times as many this year as ever before."

Brendamour attributed the heavy rush for poker chips to prohibition. He argues: "Where the booze is there is a poker game, and now the booze is in the cellar if its anywhere."
